

The House of Art: Modern Residences of Artists as the Subject and Space of Creation

The term house of art designates the cultural phenomenon and creative mode in modernity associated with an artists residence as his own creation and as his product of a need to create which is unfulfilled in the painters, writers or composers actual field. This book discusses the most important of these creations from the 18th century to the beginning of the 20th, including gardens as well as the artists space, broadly understood, annexed by his imagination. An artists shaping of his own residence was most commonly a secondary area of his creative work. The formula for a house of art is specific to the particular artist and does not have to fit within any given architectural or decorative style. It may conform to the traditions of a residence (artists palace, cottage etc), but most often it forms an individual case.
