Treaty of 1898 with Spain.-- The treaty of Paris of December 10, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 1754), which terminated the late war between the United States and Spain, and by which Spain ceded Porto Pico and the Philippine islands to the United States, provided (art. 9) that Spanish subjects, natives of the Peninsula, residing in the territory ceded, might preserve their allegiance to Spain by making, before a court of record, within a year from the date of the exchange of ratifications of the said treaty, a declaration of their decision to preserve such allegiance. The treaty declared that, in default of such declaration, they should be held to have renounced such allegiance, and to have adopted the nationality of the territory in which they resided. property and assets of the firm, and subsequently removed to Strasburg, in Alsace, then in the jurisdiction of France, where he died March 1, 1871. The memorial filed by Renriette Levy embraced both the original and tho acquired interest of Jacob Levy in the property and assets of the firm. On this state of facts, counsel for the United States demurred to the memorial Oli the following grounds: 1. As to the whole case: That it appears thai the claimant and her children, about the year 1871, became citizens or subjects of Germany, and have ever since remained, and are now. such citizens or subjects, and have not. since that year, been citizens of tho Republic of France, and that this claim is therefore not presented by or on behalf of the citizens of that Republic. 2. As to the interest alleged to have been assigned by Benjamin Weil: That, as it appears that said Weil was. at the time of the acts complained of, a citizen of the United States, the claim is not one
