

The Great War in Photos and Documents - Germany 1914

Photos from the Great War brings a unique set of images and a series of intriguing documents ranging from telegrams between Kaiser Wilhelm II and his cousin the Russian Tsar Nicolas II, and announcements on how much citizens were to be paid for stabling an army horse back into print for the first time in 100 years. Covering the first months of the war, when a bomb dropped onto Paris, just one, was headline news and German planes were enthusiastically watched by crowds in the streets of Paris, as was the appearance of a Zeppelin over Antwerp, the book contains photos of the all the main protagonists in Britain, France and Germany; rousing speeches by Kaiser Wilhelm II and the German Chancellor are also set out in full. To complement the images, a war diary lists events day by day as the fighting intensified. The reader is given a compelling view of the war, its conduct, and what people thought about it and the Allies, on the other side of the trenches in France and Prussia. For example: Undoubtedly this is the most stupid, senseless and unnecessary war of modern times, said Wilhelm Crown Prince of the German Empire and Prussia. Shortly after the German Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg sent this telegram to the German Ambassador in St. Petersburg on August 1st 1914, His Majesty the Kaiser, my august sovereign ... considers the empire to be in a state of war with Russia, mobilisation began in Germany and the horror of WWI became inevitable.
